WHITMORE BROTHERS, Publishers and Proprieto

om the New York News, Sept. 19.1 The latest phase of fashionable finan-ciering in New York has brought to light the existence of a coterie of enterpris-ing young gentlemen, who have organ-ized themselves into a matrimonial club, with the avowed object of securing rich wives for the members of the club. The range of this matrimonial organization is not confined to any special quarter of the metropolis, but extended its opera-tions from New England to the far West.

Those members of the club, who, in their daily avocations or in society, are introduced to, or hear mentioned, the name of young ladies of wealth, pursue minute inquiries as to age and residence; whether an orphan, or if with parents, whether mother or father, or both, are living; the number of brothers and sisters, wealth of parents, and the amount of the daughter's expected portion. The result of these inquiries is carefully noted in the books of the Secretary somewhat after this fashion

PIRST CLASS. Sarah Jones—aged 17; orphan and heiress; portion, $100,000. Guardian, Peter Smith (flour merchant.) Resi-dence, No. —, Madison avenue. SECOND CLASS.

Maggie Peters-half orphan; father died rich; mother and one brother liv-ing; age, 19; portion, $50,000; resi dence, No —, Fifth avenue. THIRD CLASS.

Elizabeth Van Buren-age, about 18; father and mother living; two brothers and one sister living; old gentleman good natured, and worth $9000-Fourth

Josephine Levantour-age, 20; father and mother, one brother and sister living; father doing a good business as a broker in Wall street, and likely to leave a respectable fortune to the children; residence, No. -, West Thirty-fourth street. MODE OF SELECTION.

Each new name which is added to the roll is drawn for by lottery among those members of the club who are not pro vided with marriageable female acquaint ances. After a member of the organizasecured a proper introduction, and cultivated a reasonable acquaintance, he introduces into her household one or two of his friends, who, in their turn, introduce other members of the society, who visit the family occasionally. The purport of their visit is to extol the character and capacities of their friend, whose attentions to the "flower of the soon becomes marked. The old lady and gentleman become befuddled by officious interference of their many friends, their consent is obtained, and the match is made. THE YOUNG LADIES MATRIMONIAL CO-

TERIES. The pursuit of rich marriage partners is not confined exclusively to the young men who desire to better their pecuniary condition; the daughters of Eve also pursue the fortunate subject of Mammon. with an avidity that brooks no restraint. This is secured by the formation of clubs or coteries composed exclusively of young ladies, and who elect their fem-This inine officers, who direct the movements of the club. These coteries are usually designated by some term of endearing character, as the "L'Amour Coterie, the "Pove Coterie." Their sessions are held at the residences of the most fash-ionable members of the association once a week during the winter and spring and monthly picnics are the order of the season during the summer and autumu. The invitations to their unions, as they are called, are issued in the name of the presidentress and amanuensis, and addressed to all eligible young men with whom the members are acquainted.

Desperate Encounter With a Deer. One of the most daring encounters incident to hunting life-though fortunately resulting in nothing serious-COTTON GINS.

P. M. WINTERS, Sheriff of Shethy County-one day last week. Mr. Ed. Nicholls, formerly of this place, started out one morning with his dog, through a piece of woods near his farm. Scarcely had he entered the forest, over a mile from his habitation, when suddenly up sprang a large buck from his concealment, and confronting him face to face for an confronting him face to face for an instant, made a fearful dash at him Mr. Nicholls, though having no weapon Also, Portable Engines and Horse Powers, and address Portable Engines and Horse Powers, and address Politics, at manufacturers list.

dare not to lose his hold, and the only hope to save his life was by encouraging the dog, which meanwhile hung on to the buck's throat with canine tenacity. To worry the buck to exhaustion, with the assistance of the dog, was the only means of conquering his adversary, and after a long and tiresome struggle, was finally successful, when he went and got a club and knocked the animal in the

At the end of the combat Mr. Nicholis' clothing was entirely torn from him, and he had nothing to cover the costume which nature furnished him. He returned home through by-ways, and called lustily to his wife to furnish him with clothing, and then returning he brought dressed, weighed over two hundred pounds. When we take into considera-tion the fact that Mr. N. is a very small man, weighing only about one hundred pounds, this was a courageous undertaking, and courageously did he meet it.—Eau Claire (Wis.)
